

I decided to come to Canada because, my friend lives in Toronto and he only told me good things about Canada so i decided to visit him in Toronto and do the business program in Vancouver.

I think the study and work program is a very good choice because you first learn the basics about business and afterwards you are able to gain some work experience in a company which fits your skills and your main interests.

The preparation for Canada was pretty good since PractiGo supported me a lot to get all the necessary documents. Although i had some issues with my German bank but in the end everything went fine. Thanks you guys again. =)

I heard only good things about Vancouver. Specially about the summer time here. Unfortunately, i came to Vancouver in the winter time but i also was able to feel the summer time here and i was just amazing. Vancouver has a lot of beautiful places where you can spend your time during the summer time for example the beach called "English bay" or the huge "Stanley park".

It was super easy to meet new people since everyone is sitting in the same boat as you. Everyone is from different countries and is new in the city in the beginning so it's very easy to find new people. I really made a lot of new and awesome friends from different countries (Brazil, Mexico, Korea and Europe) here.

The classes were always fun and I had very nice and skillful teacher. No i decided to enjoy my time here so i didn't work here. But i saved money before of course.

My advice is to come here and enjoy the time here as much as possible.

I'm planning to work in the sports business later other on. Either for a hockey team, soccer team or general at a sports company.

It will help me a lot since it is a very good thing to have for the CV / Résumé. Especially my internship at HEROS Hockey is probably a door opener for me in Germany since it is an international internship in the hockey business and every company will love to read that in my application.
